Noble Lady's Will.

A monument that becomes whiter in its beauty as the grass over the tomb grows higher and higher each year, cannot be made of enduring granite or the purer marble. But there is such a shaft in this city. It was erected by a woman's delicate hands, and as it is chastened by gathering years, it will add more and more luster to the name and memory of Miss Jane

The blessings which this noble woman left to the poor and sick of Pittsburg have multiplied. They will continue to multiply. Her wisdom in life is assisted by Providence after her death.

When Miss Holmes died, in May, 1885, she bequeathed $300,000 to the public charitable institutions. There was a residuary clause in the will. Through its operation the institutions have now received $600,000, and the same wise management may in the future swell this sum to nearly $1,000,000. Miss Holmes expected that her charitable bequests would be increased considerably over the specific amount named in her will in each instance, by the sale of her property, but she never expected the gifts would reach the enormous sum they have. In the three and a half years since her demise her estate has appreciated in value to such an extent that her dying requests were peculiarly favored.

DIVIDING A MILLION. After making the bequests in specific sums Miss Holmes' will closed with this paramnd personal, I hereby devise and bequeath to my executors to have and to hold in trust, to divide and apportion the same pro rata between and among the said several charitable

The estate consisted very largely of stocks and bonds. Miss Holmes held stock in about every bridge in Pittsburg, including the Suspension at Sixth street. She was also a large owner in the Bank of Pittsburg and the Exchange Bank. In the Allegheny Valley Railroad and some of the passenger rallways her money was invested in big sums. She even was interested financially in iron mills. The inventory and appraisement filed in court by Messrs. John Porterfield and J. J. Donnell, her executors, on June 10, 1885, fixed the value of her entire estate at $1,050,583. In September of the following year an additional account was filed, which showed that from the advancing value of the property, dividends and accrued interest, this total estinote had been increased in just 15 months to $1,167,052. This fairly illustrates how the appreciation of the estate continued after-

Within two years after Miss Holmes' death the executors had distributed the bequests specifically made in the will. Then they began to sell off the estate. The proceeds derived in this manner were found to amount to as much again as the sum they had given out as the original bequests. This second installment of money has only recently been distributed among the public in-

The Protestant Orphan Asylum, on Ridge avenue, Allegheny, was left $25,000 originally, and this has been doubled by the receipt of $50,000.

The Home for Aged Women, at Wilkinsburg, gets $50,000 also, instead of $25,000.

The West Penn Hospital's bequest has been increased from $10,000 to $20,000. The Homeopathic Hospital receives $20,-000 instead of $10,000. The Home for Colored Children, in Allethe United States for work among the Indians, and this has now increased to $20,000. The Protestant Home for Boys, on Anderson street, Allegheny, $50,000; the Western Pennsylvania Humane Society, $5,000, and the Home for Colored Women, in the Eleventh ward, $5,000, do not share in the residuary provision. They simply received the amounts mentioned by directions of Miss

Considerable of the estate remains to be sold. As it is very valuable it will bring enough for a third distribution of money among the charities. How much, the executors cannot of course form any idea, nor do they know when it will be made.

Miss Holmes' generosity even went so far as to exempt the charitable institutions from the payment of the collateral inheritance tax which the State demands. This she directed should be paid by the executors out of the balance of the estate. The tax when paid amounted to $54,963. The only other bequests Miss Holmes made was $200,000 to her nephew, Wm. D. Holmes, and two valuable pieces of real estate on Wood and

Penn streets, to the same gentleman. #### BLACK BALLERS BUSY. There Was an Exciting Time at the Annual Meeting of the Americus Club Lust

Night-Result of the Election. No more exciting annual meeting of Pittsburg's Americus Club has been held since its organization than that which ended last night, with the black ball as one of the most prominent emblems of the elections to membership, and the split ticket as the predominating feature in choosing officials for the ensuing year. The polls opened at 3 o'clock, and until 9 in the evening there was a steady stream of voters at the boxes. There was no bitterness displayed over any of the contests, but the friends of the various candidates worked earnestly for suc-

The annual meeting was held in the evening. The routine business passed off quietly, but when the election of new members came up the old fight was renewed. There were twenty-two candidates. Two of them went through all right, but the third man was blackballed. Then the trouble began. A half dozen members were on their feet at once, endeavoring to address the meeting and confusion was supreme.

Messrs, W. A. Maree and F. C. Miller stated that they would vote against the next man even if he were a person they much respected. They said this on account of the first man being blackballed. Finally Mr. S. Moshit got the floor. He said he had cast a blackball for reasons of his own, but if it would avoid trouble he was willing to re-consider if a second ballot were taken. The second ballot was taken, and Mr. Mofit showed a white ball as he dropped it in the box. This, however, did no good, as there were too many blackballs to permit the election. The second candidate was taken up and promptly blackballed, there being five of the 125 votes against him.

This was received with every mark of displeasure and a motion to postpone action on the 18 candidates remaining was passed. This ended the fighting, but a deep feeling of discontent was left behind.

The report of the Executive Committee for the year was submitted. On January 1, 1888, there were 207 active and 9 life members. During the year 263 active, 9 life and 10 honorary members were elected, 3 active members were suspended and 6 resigned. On January 1, 1889, there were 488 members

Letters from President-elect Harrison Senator Sherman, Governor Foraker and others accepting their election to honorary membership were read. These letters have been published. Applications were re-ceived from 25 persons for admission and referred to the Membership Committee. At 10 o'clock last night the count for officers had not yet been finished, and Vice President Baer decided, after a vote of the members present, to adjourn until Monday evening at 7:30, when the result of the ele tion will be made known. The report will not be given out before that time.

MECHANICAL SCHOOLS.

From Philadelphia The value of mechanical training and of mechanical trades schools, such as it has been proposed to establish in this and other cities, is very strikingly shown by the brief experiences and achievements of Philadelphia's Manual Training School. The institution has only been in existence about three years, and it graduated its first class last June when 58 hove were sent out with diplomas certifying that they were profi-cient in the use of tools in joinery, wood-carving, forging, brazing, molding, casting, modeling and other mechanical pursuits, and that they had completed the other required studies of the school. Of the boys who have gone to work one found a place with the Welsbach Lighting Company, at Gloucester. After being there a few weeks and obtaining a thorough knowledge of the business the company sen him to Pittsburg to take charge of a station at a salary of $100 per month and expenses. ### CAN SUCH THINGS BE?

Is Colonel Quay Planning a Good-Lord,-Good-Satan Campaign?

STARTLING ALLEGED INSIDE TIP.

Showing That the Blue Laws Must Remain Sacredly Intact.

BROOKS LAW CHANGE AND PROHIBITION

There is a member of the Legislature from Allegheny county who resembles his ac-knowledged leader, Silent Mat Quay, in two particulars. One is that he is a politician, and the other is that he is a leader in his party; but here, it is alleged by a friend of both, the resemblance ceases, and, unlike his famous leader, the Allegheny county man cannot refrain from telling tales out of school. The following item is one of his tales, and they are said by a business man, interested enough to have probed them, to be truthful ones at that.

"Colonel Quay came to the Seventh Avenue Hotel a few days ago, and remained several hours in conference with the political leaders of the Quay faction in this end of the State. His visit, so he said, was merely one of pleasure, and had nothing at all to do with politics. Such is the story he related to the reporters, who listened, looked wise and believed directly the opposite. The real reason for the gathering was to map out the course of the Republican party during the coming session of the Legislature, so that the great mass of citizens would be pleased with its actions, and continue to uphold the party and vote for its candidates.

DID THE COLONEL SAY SO? "The first principle adopted was that the party should be the 'God and morality party:' (these are his own words). Such actions as amendments to the Brooks laws are to be shoved upon the Democratic party and the Liberal League. This, the confer ence was to have the general public believe; but the large majority of liquor dealers who are to be on the inside, a much soughtafter spot, so frequently found, are to know that it was really the Republican party that enacted this law. "The Brooks high license law will. according to his own sayings, undergo some great changes. The granting of licenses is to be taken out of the hands of the judges, on the plea of overwork for the courts, and placed in the hands of a commission, which is to be politically appointed. There is to be no very formal hearing of applicants, and it is expected that every 'respectable man,' who has the price of a license and can obtain security, will be granted one. "The old 'blue laws' are to remain untouched. All the proposed amendments to them are to be fought and defeated. WHY THEY MUST PREEZE. "This will leave the druggists out in the cold; but they are in the minority. One of them asked this same leader what he should do to be saved from the blue laws. He was informed that the best course he could pursue was to go home, obey the laws and not take any part in a useless campaign. Their idea in this is to counteract any bad effects of the amendment of the Brooks law and hold on to the 'fireside vote.'

"This," the informant stated, "is one o it is the best course, for, if we allow the druggists to remain open on Sundays and sell soda water and cigars, the cigar dealer will ask why he cannot also sell his goods If we permit him, why, the liquor dealer will follow both of them, and we would have a terrible time trying to suit every-body; and the best thing to do is to shut off the first man who appeals; and that stops them all. "The Constitutional Prohibitory Amend ment movement is to be fostered, and the amendment is to be submitted to the people. Until a vote is taken on this question, and he result known, it will not be necessary to other about it. There were also alleged to have been several plans made out for the election of Councilmen in this city next spring, but what they were the informant could not or

PERKINS' GALLERY.

The Detective Has Collected the Photographs of the 364 Criminals He Has G. B. Perkins is at present engaged in making up a "rogues' gallery" of portraits of all the criminals arrested by him during the last 12 years, or of those who were arrested through his instrumentality. The number reaches 364, and he has the photo graphs of everyone. Attached to the gallery is also a catalogue containing the names of the persons, the crimes which caused arrest, the time of arrest, their conviction, and he sentence they received. The list contains the names of 213 counerfeiters, 12 murderers, 11 burglars, 2 blackmailers and 2 confidence men, beside criminals of all classes. In the list can be ound the name of Sam Thompson, who was charged with defrauding the Government by using imitation plates. The peculiarity about his case was that upon being convicted of his crime he paid a fine of $85,000, and he was discharged.

Another peculiar case is that of the celeorated nickel counterfeiter, John Mogel, When he was convicted, Judge McCandless sentenced him to undergo the extraordinary penalty of 30 days in the penitentiary. The picture of W. E. Brockway, of New York, one of the smartest counterfeiters in America to-day, is very prominent on the list. Brockway is known as the man who first used the soft plate. The pictures of the Bidwells, McDonalds and of Miss Demorest, the Bank of England counterfeiters, are also among the number.

There are pictures of 18 women in the gallery, but a look into the catalogue shows that the females have invariably succeeded in getting off tree before the courts. As a mere matter of peculiarity it is also noticeable that there is not a lawver on the criminal list, while there are three medical men, all branded as counterfeiters. These are: Dr. J. D. McWhater, Dr. F. L. Vintree and Dr. M. H. Frank.

GO VERY SLOW! The Advice Given by Allegheny Citizens as to the Charter. Thirty citizens held a meeting in Allegheny Council Chamber last night to discuss the proposed city charter. J. H. Stevenson was made Chairman and Henry Francis Secretary. State Legislator Robison and Councilman Stayton were present and spoke briefly on the matter. Mr. Robison explained how the city could be divided and the number of wards increased, thereby increasing the number of Councilmen. He said that if each of the 13 wards of the city were allowed but one member in Select Council, as provided in the new charter, the balance of power would be invested in the majority, and he inferred that seven men might not always act to the best interests of the city or citizens. Mr. Stayton said the matter was one of great moment, and though he was ready to act promptly at all times in the interest of his constituents, yet he favored slow progress in this matter by reason of its importance. It was decided that a general mass meeting be called for to-morrow night in the Conneil Chamber

Tom Barry is in town, with enough ammunition, if it does not meet the same fate as the Pittsburg gun, that will blow the Knights of Labor in this vicinity out of existence. The great enemy of T. V. Powderly, the expelled member of the "G. E. B.," arrived from Cleveland on the 2 o'clock train yesterday afternoon, prepared to do a week's work in the city. He was royally received by the Knights here, and was conducted to a meeting of Ax Makers' Local Assembly in Lawrenceville, and was admitted, notwithstanding the fact that he did not have the "pass word." This is the first case in the history of the order where a man was admitted to a strictly Knight of Labor meeting who did not belong to the organization and did not have the password. The ax makers are attached to N. T. A. 154, in good standing in the Knights of Labor, and Mr. Barry was their National Master Workman, Notwithstanding his expulsion from the order, they insist on retaining him as the head of their organization, and if, as they say, they are expelled it will save them the trouble of withdrawing from the order, as they have voted unanimously to enter Mr. Barry's

When he appeared on the floor of the hall he was greeted with cheers, and when the enthusiasm had subsided he made an address, explaining his position and telling SOME OF THE SECRETS of the order that have never reached the public. He announced that he would meet the Knights of Labor of the city and hold secret meeting in the K. of L. hall on Monday evening, if permitted to do so; if not, another hall would be secured. During the balance of the week public meetings will be held in the interest of the new order, the Brotherhood of United Workmen.

Mr. Barry was accompanied by his confidential secretary, T. J. Wallace, an exclerk in the general office. He spent the evening in visiting his friends in the city and was on his way to D. A. 3 headquarters when a DISPATCH reporter met him. Mr. Barry has not been in Pittsburg since his severe illness last March, when he was not expected to recover. He is enjoying perfect health and says he is ready for a work. Those who wanted to charge their hard year's work. When asked if the ax makers were not Yesterday afternoon, when Master Workman Doyle was informed by a reporter for this paper that Mr. Barry intended to visit the headquarters and lecture in the hall, he said: "I am in charge of the headquarters, and Mr. Barry cannot enter there. As far as the hall is concerned, it is in charge of the Board of Trustees, and if they give him permission to occupy it, I have nothing to When informed of Mr. Dovle's statement, Barry said, with a smile:

"I will visit the headquarters on Monday morning, and would like to meet Mr. Doyle. HE OPENS THE MINE. Mr. Barry was asked what information he had to give regarding the affairs of the Knights of Labor that had not yet been published, and he replied that if everything that was done that should not have been done was published "it would fill several large volumes."

"Bob Layton says that, if you continue your work, he has the power to silence you, and will do so," said the reporter.
"I am not ashamed of anything have done, and not a cent

Layton is a tool in Powderly's hands, and when Powderly promised him the position of General Secre-tary Le showed his willingness to be used as a tool. He was set aside, however, for Pow-derly's man Friday, as I knew he would be when Powderly wrote him a letter be-ginning 'Dear Bob' and ending 'Ever yours, Terry.' Bob is too small fry to waste any thunder on, but I am ready to meet any charge he has to make against me and I don't think he can keep his boast to silence great deal of trouble experienced with the gas companies; and besides all, such Pitts-

Mr. Smith met Mr. Barry last night and told him that there might be some opposition to his occupying the hall, when he informed Smith that if he was barred from the hall McKeesport, shall run them, there is no hope. Yet some are now inclined to think that Messrs. Phipps and Walker, of the Car-negie firm, will run them. he would secure another one. Continuing, to a DISPATCH reporter.

When delegates arose in the convention to ask questions on the subject they were promptly rapped down, and when other delegates, who occupied clerical positions in the general office, said: 'Alf that Barry charges we can prove and a great deal more.' Powderly's reply was: 'Go to Philadelphia and prove your charges.' Representative Winters responded by saying: 'This is where proof is wanted. I have it here and am prepared to give it.'

The reasons why I was kept out of the convention was their fear to meet me, knowing that I could prove all my charges and more that I hadn't made. Mr. Powderly used $2.200 of poverty's money to build his palatial home in Scranton. He never paid it back to my knowledge. He and his colleagues dare not allow an expert accountant to go through the records of that office and report his findings. I believe the iron grip of the law would inclose them if an accountant did his work properly. The Knights of Labor as represented by the Powderly regime for the past two years has been the means of leading thousands of working people to hunger and victimization. At Cohoes, N. Y., during the lockout of 11,000 knit goods workers, I found families who were "freezing and starving to death. When the master workman of the district applied for aid to relieve those people he was told that he did not vote right at the General Assembly, or, in other words, he had voted against the Powderly administration. At this time the G. A. had more than $100,000 in bank.

lies and he knows he does when he makes tness assertions. I am a citizen of our common country and am proud of it, and owe allegiance to no flag but the stars and stripes. It would be more honorable in him and his colleagues to tell what was done with $485,000 of poverty's money in one year, than to be constantly appealing to popular prejudice against one whom he dare not meet before the bar of the order, the bar of public opinion or in the court of law to defend his position as against mine.

I had protested constantly against the illegal and reckless extravagance in the expenditure of labor's money, and so did W. H. Bailey, but to no avail. The board is on record as voting to deny Bailey and Barry an itemized account of the money expended in the general office. This information we should have to enable us to do our duty as the custodians of the order's property and its money. When we were refused this information, Bailey remarked that he would have it if he had to go through the courts of Pennsylvania and hell un to his eyes to get it. Notwithstanding this we never received the information that we sought. I have letters from more than 500 local assemblies of the Knights of Labor and some districts requesting me to come in person The syndicate that started out to gobble up the Pittsburg, Allegheny and Manchester Railroad has succeeded, but some of the stock needed to control the road was bought in at an unusually high price. Several of the oldest and prominent stockholders have sold their stock, and now the syndicate owns 4,500 shares out of 7,000. This shut out Commodore Kountz entirely, as he only controls the balance of the stock, and the anti-Kountz stockholders will have every-

Powderly quotes one Dovern, of Augusta, Ga., as authority to prove that my work was detrimental to the interest of the order in that section while I was there. Notwithstanding the statement, I have letters from the people of the district that I did good work and that it was bearing fruit. We had several thousand dollars of an indebtedness in Augusta contracted by the General Executive Board. This debt is still owing, but not reported in the General Treasurer's report at the Indianapolis Convention. This man Dovern told the merchants to whom we are indebted to send all bills to his office as the General Executive Board had made arrangements to pay them through him, and that he would expect a 10 per cent discount for his trouble in collecting the same. I interfered, and told the mering to be held on the third Monday of this Mr. George B. Hill, who bought in the stock for the syndicate, was seen by a DIS-PATCH reporter yesterday, and said: "We now control 4,500 shares of the stock, but I cannot tell you anything about our plans for the future, as nothing definite has yet been ing the same. I interfered, and told the mer-chants that all bills honored would be paid directly to them and no money shark would be allowed to come between the order and them. Those bills, however, have never been paid and some of the merchants have done, and may not be done at the annual meeting. There may be a change in the motive power, but I think we will continue to use horses until we know more about electricity. Something may be done soon, but very likely not for a year. The committee that was appointed to investigate the different systems will not make a report been driven into bankruptcy. The order still owes that money.

Mr. Barry will leave this morning for Beaver Falls, where he will be the guest of at the next meeting as expected, as some of the ax makers of that place, and will adthem have sold their stock and have nothdress a meeting in the local assembly this ing more to do with the road."

Mr. Henry M. Long, a broker, who holds a great deal of stock in the road, was seen, and in speaking of the probability of changing the motive power said: "I do not know what will be done, but understand that some of the stockholders favor the adoption of the Tesla motor, manufactured by the Westinghouse Electric Company. motor, it is claimed, will run a car for 30 miles, and when it is exhausted another one possible to learn the reason, except that the can be put in.
